

Penticton Cosmetic Dentist

Whereas conventional dentistry focuses on oral hygiene and preventing, diagnosing and treating oral disease, cosmetic dentistry concentrates on improving the look of a person's teeth, mouth and smile. In other words restorative, general and/or family dental practices deal with tooth problems that require necessary treatment, whereas cosmetic dentistry provides elective or preferred treatments or services. Cosmetic dentistry can provide some restorative benefits. In the past, most fillings were composed of materials that were known to leave visible dark spots on the teeth. Today, you can select fillings that strongly match the color of your teeth. The majority of these fillings are constructed of composite materials or porcelain. Consequently, the majority of people now see very little difference between their fillings and their natural teeth.

Such advancements in technology have made today's cosmetic treatments to a great extent more predictable and longer lasting than before. Additionally, dentists are currently using more conservative cosmetic dentistry procedures to preserve as much of your natural tooth structure as possible, depending upon your particular medical situation. Some examples of Cosmetic Dentistry Treatments are:

1. Implants

Implants are artificial tooth root replacements that are used to compensate for tooth loss. The result is typically an enhanced smile and a more youthful appearance.

2. Onlays/Inlays

Inlays and onlays can be made from porcelain or composite materials. They are a long-lasting and cosmetic way to provide fillings to teeth experiencing tooth decay.

3. Composite Bonding

Chipped, broken, discolored or decayed teeth may be repaired or have their appearance corrected using a process called composite bonding. A dental composite material with the appearance of enamel and dentin is applied into the cavity or onto the surface of a tooth, where it is then sculpted into shape, contoured and hardened with a high-intensity light. The result is a restoration that blends invisibly with the remainder of the surrounding tooth structure and the rest of your natural teeth to produce a healthy, bright smile.

4. Complete Mouth Reconstruction

While consulting with you about a smile make-over to primarily improve the esthetic look of your smile, your dentist might discover that there is a need to give crucial treatment to correct functional problems with your bite, muscles, teeth and bone structure. If you require full mouth restoration, the materials accessible today make it feasible for your dentist to provide you with durable, functional and clinically sound treatments that also look natural.

5. Tooth Whitening Procedures

Teeth whitening is perhaps the most commonly recommended cosmetic dentistry procedure. Teeth are often tainted from smoking, food, drink (coffee, tea or red wine) or poor oral hygiene. Bleaching the teeth can enhance the appearance of your smile.

6. Dental Veneers (Composite and Porcelain)

Composite or porcelain laminates that are adhesively bonded to the surface of a tooth to correct and repair chips and cracks will enhance a worn appearance or serious tooth discoloration. Veneers might also be suggested if you have gaps in your teeth or if you have not had success with teeth whitening.
